

YOUR PROBLEMS

"It's Great Fun, ... Enjoy Exercise"

Dear Ann Landers: I am 35 years old and the mother of four active children. My daughters are 11 and 9 years of age and they love for me to play hop-scotch with them. It's great fun for me, and I enjoy the exercise.

My husband says it's a disgrace for a woman my age to be hopping around in front of the house with the kids. I say if grown men can play ball with their sons what's wrong with a mother playing hop-scotch?

Why shouldn't women be able to indulge in a harmless sport without criticism? What do you think? — YOUNG IN HEART

Dear Young: If you are dressed respectably (not in shorts) I see nothing wrong with playing hop-scotch in front of the house with your children.

(P.S. Do be careful when you jump that third square, Mom, the old bones don't knit like they used to!)

Dear Ann Landers: We have five children ranging from 7 to 10 years of age, and only two bedrooms. We bought this house when we had only two children. I say we need a bigger house. My husband says the kids will be grown and gone before we know it and we'll be stuck.

We have cots all over and you'd think we were camping out. We could easily add two rooms but my husband says it's not worth it. I say why not live a decent life while you're living? He says I'm not practical.

Three years ago he bought a boat. Last summer he paid $1100 for a boat. If you think he's right and I'm crazy, please say so and I'll shut up. — THE PERMANENT CAMPER

Dear Camper: Your husband claims if he added two bedrooms to the house he'd be stuck. Please ask him "Stuck with what?" A house that would bring an additional 25% at time of sale?

I agree you need a bigger house. Furthermore, it's shortsighted and selfish of your husband to buy a new car and a boat first. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a miserable 14-year-old girl who has two gigantic problems—my mother and my father.

Every girl in our crowd has more freedom than I have. I'm an honor student, don't smoke or drink, have never caused them any worry, and yet they treat me as if I were in the kindergarten.

You have often said in your column that teenagers have to EARN trust. Well, I have earned it but I don't get it.

The big argument now is about slumber parties. All my friends can go to slumber parties—but not me. The illogical part of it is, my folks say I HAVE slumber parties at my home, but I can't attend any. Does this make sense?

I'm beginning to feel so cooped up it's making me sick. Please express your views and maybe they will loosen up. They think you are pretty sound. — CAGED TEEN

Dear Caged: The big problem for parents today is to know how to decide on the middle ground between too much and too little freedom, and believe me, it's not easy.

There is no rule of thumb because teenagers vary and some are able to handle more freedom than others. The best way is to ask your parents to let you try on the cloak of responsibility. It fits, fine. If not—back to the rompers.

A slumber party chaperoned by parents should be within bounds for a 14-year-old. You have MY O.K. I hope you get theirs.
